It records your progress through the extended essay process and includes your reflective statement addressing your extended essay experience. You must undertake three formal reflection sessions with your supervisor: The first formal reflection session should focus on your initial ideas and how you plan to undertake your research; the interim reflection session takes place once a significant amount of your research has been completed, and the final session will be in the form of a viva voce, once you have completed and handed in your extended essay. This document acts as a record in supporting the authenticity of your work. Following the viva voce, you write a* reflective statement of no more than 500 words., which must be included on the RPF.

Reflective statement

(No more than 500 words, written in the same language as the accompanying extended essay)

When presenting my basic outline and the background of my RQ, I realized that I needed to research further to write this paper: actual experimental facts such as labeling samples and chemicals, determining conditions to carry out a fair test, amount of reactants needed, and most effective lab design were still issues to solve.

Writing the EE was an intriguing and challenging process. I could not experiment, but instead, I found interesting studies related to my topic. However, it took me time and effort to fully comprehend and analyze the data from these papers, as some theories were unfamiliar to me, such as Young´s Modulus. My advisor and other mentors helped me with this.

I am proud of my work, though I know it is imperfect. I feel I have grasped the essential data from many sources, and I have been able to comprehend scientific research papers. There is room for improvement in the clarity and specificity of the work. I struggled with in-text citations and learned that even the most complex chemistry can be related to standard materials such as IMFs and ion charges. I wish I could have experimented to obtain more concrete results. I hope that further research will improve lead removal.
