A: Framework for the essay [Maximum possible mark: 6]	3	The research question (RQ) is relevant to the topic of the investigation but only partially focused in relation to the scope of the essay. The RQ, and subsequent discussion, does not specify a time frame for the investigation. Research methods that are mostly suitable for the RQ are explained and applied with partial effectiveness. A very good effort was made to collect primary data through surveys and interviews. However, there is a heavy reliance on primary data which, while useful, needed to be supported by more secondary research. Structural elements used in the essay support some aspects of communication of the research. • Diagrams are well-presented, however, the figure numbers are inaccurate. • There are citations for some of the information, but these do not match the way that the references are cited in the bibliography, and the bibliography is not entirely in a discernible order. • There is a table of contents, but the page numbers do not accurately display the correct page numbers. • There is little justification for the inclusion of the pictures, as they do not add to the discussion. Thus, they are distracting. • The presentation of many pie charts as a block disturbs the flow of the discussion to some extent.
B: Knowledge and understanding	3	Relevant research materials are used to establish some knowledge of the subject matter.

[Maximum possible mark: 6]		Some relevant terminology is used accurately to demonstrate understanding of the subject matter. Some relevant concepts are explained and used with partial effectiveness to demonstrate understanding of the subject matter. The rather large and complicated body of knowledge concerning monopoly/monopsony/bilateral monopolies has been distilled into a fairly superficial discussion, and remains largely separate from the case study. So while plausible, the concepts are used with only partial effectiveness. The concept of well-being, noted in the RQ itself, has been rather superficially treated.
C: Analysis and line of argument [Maximum possible mark: 6]	3	The early part of the essays is descriptive (e.g. "we will study the evolution of the market"). However, the essay goes on to include some analysis that is partially effective and produces some relevant findings. The survey generates some responses that address the general concept of well-being. A partially consistent line of argument links the research question, research findings and conclusions. There is a tenuous link between the economic theory and the discussions of the research findings. While the theory chosen is relevant, it is not closely matched with the case study research. The lack of a focused time frame in the discussion is a limitation.
D: Discussion and evaluation [Maximum possible mark: 8]	4	A partially balanced discussion of the significance of the findings is sometimes supported by appropriate evidence. An evaluation of the effectiveness of the essay is present with some strengths and limitations stated. There is some valid reflection on the reliability of the sources on page 4, and this is reinforced in the "Limitations of the investigation' on page 16. Comments related to things such as 'sampling bias' (p. 16) and 'principal agent problem' (p 11) show that evaluation is present.
E: Reflection [Maximum possible mark: 4]	2	Reflection on the extended essay learning experience is descriptive and includes some specific examples. Reflection sometimes shows evidence of the student's growth and transfer of learning.

Total marks awarded	15/30
Holistic comment on the essay:	This is a satisfactory extended essay. There is evidence of research undertaken. The student has chosen a topic that is worthy of investigation but the RQ is not necessarily expressed in a way that can be explored within the scope of the chosen topic. There is an attempted application of source material with some appropriate terminology and concepts. There is partially successful evaluation of the research. There is reflection on the learning experience, which is largely descriptive but makes an attempt to include specific examples.
