Assessment details
Criterion:	Mark awarded:	Commentary: (Incorporating wording from the assessment criteria)
A: Framework for the essay [Maximum possible mark: 6]	3	Research Question: The RQ is relevant and focused on setting as well as communicating the dangers of that setting to those readers in the world. So there is a partially literary focus in relation to the scope. Research Methods: The introduction notes how four themes will be engaged, and the explanation is quite brief, so partially effective, as is the application. Structure: The essay is divided into four themes, which are subdivided. This can lead to a choppy structure, and even underdeveloped ideas at times. The structural conventions used support some aspects of the communication of the research.
B: Knowledge and understanding [Maximum possible mark: 6]	4	Knowledge: Somewhat relevant research materials—they are mostly focused on the novel but sources are limited—YouTube, Owlfication, a blog (though containing diary entries); a newspaper and an encyclopedia are more academic. They are somewhat effectively used to establish knowledge but secondary sources are not effectively incorporated, being identified just by a title in brackets; the primary text is quoted but not cited. Terminology: This is engaged throughout and used accurately (primarily diction, theme, imagery, symbol, juxtaposition. Concepts: The concept of the totalitarian society is explored through setting and explained with partial effectiveness.

C: Analysis and line of argument [Maximum possible mark: 6]	4	Analysis: The essay does identify the various dangers prevalent in various settings. Line of Argument: This is partially consistent; the conclusion to the findings can move away from the text out into the world.
D: Discussion and evaluation [Maximum possible mark: 8]	4	Discussion: the essay does both identify findings and explain their significance, sometimes within the text, sometimes within the outside world. In terms of balance, secondary sources are engaged, though it is not necessarily obvious when they are—signal phrases and quotes aren't present, just the title in brackets at the end. Evaluation: This is difficult to assess, as this student has not considered the strengths and limitations of the essays. A best fit mark has been applied.
E: Reflection [Maximum possible mark: 4]	3	Evaluative: This is partly evaluative, as the candidate assesses how their focus was refined and how they engaged with the process, with some examples. Growth: There is some discussion of transfer of skills and development of understanding
Total marks awarded	18/30
Holistic comment on the essay:	While there is focus on various settings and how Orwell uses literary devices to critique totalitarianism, some conclusions can venture out into the world. The mark for D could be higher with evidence of evaluation.
