Assessment details
Criterion:	Mark awarded:	Commentary: (Incorporating wording from the assessment criteria)
A: Framework for the essay [Maximum possible mark: 6]	5	RQ: As written, the RQ could be using the lyrics to support a psychological argument about mental health, and while he does engage this issue, the essay does have a literary focus. Methodology: Clearly stated; will analyze various literary devices to determine how the musician uses them regarding mental health in Britain. Structure: The essay is organized by three songs, which seems an appropriate number because each is developed. Quoting is effective as well (uses the time instead of line number). A bit brief at 3,300 words.
B: Knowledge and understanding [Maximum possible mark: 6]	4	Knowledge: Secondary sources/research materials are all social articles on mental health in the UK. There are no reviews of Lovejoy's music. Perhaps because his music is quite current, the knowledge of him/his music looks to come from the candidate's own experience of him. Terminology: This is relevant throughout and demonstrates knowledge of the lyrics. Concepts: Concepts of mental health in the UK are explained; "Boris" is identified and explained.

C: Analysis and line of argument [Maximum possible mark: 6]	5	Analysis: Analysis is focused on the lyrics, while contextualized by the larger mental health issue; effective and does produce relevant findings. Line of Argument: This is mostly clear throughout, linking the RQ, findings, and conclusions, though topic sentences like "the most prominent part of the song is certainly the fourth verse" don't follow an argument.
D: Discussion and evaluation [Maximum possible mark: 8]	5	Discussion: This is balanced, and although the significance of the findings look toward improving the UK mental health system, the discussion is grounded in the literary techniques of the lyrics. The final analytical paragraphs on who Boris is, moves away from the songs to the larger issue. Evaluation: Difficult to assess, as the essay does not explicitly do this. A best fit mark has been applied.
E: Reflection [Maximum possible mark: 4]	2	Evaluative: Mainly descriptive with some specific examples, e.g. does reflect on how the RQ was refined and the importance of this study. Growth: Sometimes shows evidence of growth and transfer: notes some research challenges faced and reflects on the pleasure of engaging in this topic. Notes some skills that will transfer to university, albeit superficially.

Holistic comment on the essay:	From the RQ, the essay had the potential to use lyrics to support a discussion of the UK's mental health issues but it kept its focus on a literary analysis of the lyrics within that larger context. Wavering between 4 and 5 for B, but the lack of any literary sources keeps it at 4.
