Assessment details
Criterion:	Mark awarded:	Commentary: (Incorporating wording from the assessment criteria)
A: Framework for the essay [Maximum possible mark: 6]	3	The Research Question is only partially relevant to the study of English society and culture. Though the introduction gives some context to the position of women at each period of the two films, there is no specific reference to Anglophone culture. (1-2 mark band). Research methods (relevant secondary resources) are suitable and are applied with partial effectiveness, as there is some reference to them. (3-4 mark band) Structural conventions are effective: clear introduction, body and conclusion/comparison. There is, however, no indication why this topic is relevant or appropriate for English B. (3-4 mark band)
B: Knowledge and understanding [Maximum possible mark: 6]	4	Knowledge: Research materials are relevant and establish some knowledge of the topic. They are not, however, comprehensive. (3-4) Terminology is generally accurate, showing understanding, but overall the essay lacks academic sophistication. (3-4) Relevant concepts, such as feminism, women's identity and roles, the various waves of feminism, are explained and used effectively. (5-6)
C: Analysis and line of argument [Maximum possible mark: 6]	4	There is some unnecessary description of the story line of each film, but the essay does include analysis, which is partially effective and produces some relevant findings. (3-4) The line of argument is clear, linking the RQ, the research findings and comparison, and the conclusion. (5-6)
D: Discussion and evaluation [Maximum possible mark: 8]	5	Discussion of the significance of the findings is partially balanced; supporting evidence is drawn more from the primary sources, the films, than from the secondary sources. On page 14, there is an evaluation of the effectiveness of the essay, indicating some relevant strengths and limitations of the argument.

E: Reflection [Maximum possible mark: 4]	3	Reflection on the learning experience is partially evaluative; examples of new insight regarding the development of women's liberation are mentioned. The reflection often shows evidence of the student's growth in research, essay planning and analysis skills, such as choosing a subject and topic with more accessible resources, and developing a plan at the start, which, it is claimed, will help the student in their university studies.

Holistic comment on the essay:	The major failing in this essay is that it does not follow the English B requirement to focus on an issue relating specifically to Anglophone society or culture. The development of the role and position of women is not limited to American or Anglophone society. Though there is no longer the penalty of a cap applied to the marks in certain criteria, this will affect Criterion A. Apart from this, this is a sound, middle of the road essay. The candidate shows a good grasp of the topic and RQ, and the secondary research is applied appropriately. Examples are detailed and support the claims effectively. Had the candidate chosen a later Disney movie to compare to Cinderella, the development in the position of women would have been much easier to show.
