

Substitute run sheet — TOK Lesson 2

The site does the teaching. Students work in groups of 3–4, one device per group, at this page. Your job is grouping, timing, circulating, and collecting worksheets. You do not need to know any philosophy — but if you want the one-line version: a lucky guess is not knowledge, and a reason has to actually connect to the thing it's claiming.

Before they start

- Hand out one worksheet per student (5 pages — double-sided is 3 sheets). Groups of 3–4. One person per group drives the device.
- Say this: “Everything is on the website. The one rule is that nobody clicks a Reveal button until every person in the group has written something down.”
- Write the four part names and their times on the board.

Timing — call these out

Time	Part	What you should see
0–15	Part 1 · Farmer John	Loud argument, then quiet writing. Most groups vote “yes he knew.” That’s meant to happen.
15–25	Part 2 · The Elder	Callback to last lesson. Q7 on the worksheet is the hard one — push them to write four sentences, not one.
25–45	Part 3 · The Cards	Nine pairs, self-checking on screen. Pair 9 is optional. Cut this first if you’re behind.
45–75	Part 4 · The Repair	Three stages. Stage 3 (Jupiter) is silent individual writing — protect it.
75–80	Exit question	Individual. Collect worksheets on the way out.

Two things to watch for while you circulate

- Clicking ahead. If a group has revealed an answer with blank worksheets, send them back to write it before moving on. This is the single thing that ruins the lesson.
- Stage 3 scaffolding. Some student will ask you to help them with the Jupiter rewrite. Don’t — that stage is deliberately unsupported. Say: “Look at how the medicine example did move 2 and do the same thing here.” That’s all the help they get.

If something goes wrong

- Devices won’t work. The worksheet stands alone for Parts 1, 2 and 4 — read the stories aloud from the screen at the front instead. Skip Part 3.
- They finish early. Pair 9 of the cards, then: “Write a card of your own — a claim with a reason that sounds excellent and is worthless.”
- A discussion turns into an argument about religion (Stage 3, Sentence B). Redirect once: “Nobody is being asked whether the text is true. You’re being asked why a community treats it as an authority.” Then move on.

Collect

All worksheets, named, in one pile. Leave them on the desk.
